

My local NBC affiliate, KCRA in Sacramento, plays about 80-90 % of their public service announcements from 1-5am in the morning. I actually went in and got a schedule of their PSA's to confirm this fact. I would actually expect to see this sort of thing accross the board with other stations, as it is obvious that the right regulations are not in place to prevent this sort of thing. If public service announcements exist to promote the public good, then they should be aired at times when people are watching television.
